Carlisle's entrance with the committee was greeted with long continued cheers Being escorted to the speaker's chair he spoke as follows

Mr Chairman and Gentlemen of the Caucus

Your committee has just formally informed me of my unanimous nomination as speaker of the house of representatives and I am here to thank you very briefly and very earnestly for the confidence reposed in me I trust you may never have reason to regret your action this evening, and when the labors of the Forty-eighth congress are closed you will be able to congratulate yourselves that no material interest of your party or country has been injuriously affected by my administration of the office for which you have nominated me In fact, I may go a step further and venture to express a confident hope that every substantial interest will be advanced and promoted by the united efforts of the presiding officer and the democratic majority on the floor Such a result will ensure a victory in the great contests yet to come, and guarantee a long line of democratic executives with an honest, economical, constitutional administration of our public affairs

Randall then addressed the caucus He said

A majority of the democratic representatives of the forty-eighth congress have seen fit to designate the distinguished gentleman from Kentucky for the exalted position of speaker. His administration shall have my firm, fixed and honorable support To my friends in the minority, who may be disappointed at the result, I tender my gratitude for their support I bow to the decision of the majority of my colleagues My duties to my country and my party will be performed with unflagging zeal and cheerfulness.

Mr Cox returned thanks to the gentlemen who had given him their confidence, and pledged all assistance in his power to the gentleman who had been chosen for the speakership The nomination of sergeant at arms was conferred upon John P Leedon, of Ohio, by acclamation The next roll call was for door keeper and resulted in the choice of J, G Wintersmith, of Texas, by the following vote Wintersmith 95, C W Field 67, Colt, of Connecticut, 20

Six nominations were made for postmaster During roll call it became apparent that Lycurgus Dalton of Indiana, present superintendent of the document room of the senate, had a majority and without announcing the vote the nomination was made unanimous

Rev John L Lindsey, pastor of the Protestant Episcopal church of Georgetown, D C, was unanimously nominated chaplain

On motion of General Slocum, of New York, seconded by General Rosecrans, it was unanimously resolved that fourteen crippled and disabled union soldiers now borne on the soldiers' roll under the door keeper of the house of representatives, be retained on said roll, subject, however, to dismissal for just and sufficient cause The caucus at 12 30 a. m adjourned sine die

Blaine on Surplus Revenue

PHILADELPHIA, December 2 —The Philadelphia Press contains a letter from James G Blaine to Charles Emory Smith, editor of the Press, stating Blaine's objections to the distribution of the surplus revenue of the federal government among the states, and proposing, as a substitute, that if the national government no longer needs a tax on spirits, the entire amount of its yield should be paid to the states

Three fatal objections, in Blaine's opinion, *make the Pennsylvania proposition to dis*tribute the federal surplus unwise

1. The utter uncertainty of the size of the redundant revenue It may be $1,000,000 or $100,000,000, and unless it was steady no state tax could be remitted on account of the receipt of this, while sporadic contributions to the state would be wasted, as was the last distribution of the federal surplus

2 The division of this surplus would impose on senators and representatives a divided duty. For the sake of their states they would wish the surplus to be as large possible, which would present a constant temptation to withhold appropriations from the objects really of national character

3 The assumption of a continuing redundancy of the national revenue is opposed to all sound views of administration, because it is sure to yield to extravagance, corruption and all manner of schemes for getting rid of money The time is rapidly approaching, however, when the national revenue, yielding under the present system of taxation, $100,000,000 beyond the amount required for government expenses, must be reduced A strong movement is already on foot for the repeal of the entire system of internal revenue, which receives the support of such protectionists as Judge Kelly and free traders like Mr. Cox, of New York This conjunction of opposing views in support of the abolition of the same tax gives a rare opportunity to relieve taxation in the states Of all our taxes, state taxation is the most oppressive It is direct. It falls on property with a crushing force In a few communities it is less than 1 per cent, and in most it is over 2 per cent.

Why, therefore, should not the states be permitted to have a tax on spirits for their own benefit if the national government does not need it? Can it be wise to continue a direct tax on property, and at the same time command a hurtful luxury like spirits to go free a luxury whose taxation oppresses no one? The customs revenues of the national government monopolizes Excise is open in theory to both state and national use in taxation, but in practice national authority alone can levy an excise tax on whiskey No state can guard its borders against whiskey from other states, or make an economical collection of such tax within its own revenue. The federal machinery for the collections of this revenue is in full operation, and a bill of ten lines could direct the secretary of the treasury to pay the whole of it, less the small expense of collection, to the states and territories in proportion to their population, and continue it permanently as part of the regular annual revenue Such a plan would give a revenue from such a tax wholly to the states, and would not depend upon a chance surplus or an accidental remainder in the national treasury. It would make a tax on spirituous and malt liquors a permanent resource to all the states, enabling them thereby to definitely adjust and reduce their own taxation Each state could most wisely use its share according to its own necessities The total return tax on spirituous and malt liquors last year was over $86,000,000, an amount which would tend to increase rather than diminish as each state saw the suppression of illicit distilleries was to its advantage With this revenue state taxation could be remitted, state debts paid, or if the aid were divided between cities and counties, their expenses would be proportionately diminished In a table annexed to the letter, Mr Blaine shows the share of the large states on the basis of population to be, $8,507 000 for New York, $7,1?0,000 for Pennsylvania, $5,-85,000 for Illinois, and $5,590,000 for Ohio, the smaller states receiving in proportion,

Glove Fight

BOSTON, December 1 —A six round glove fight, Marquis of Queensbury rules purse $500, took place here in a private club room last night between Jim Connelly of Boston and Fiddler Neary of New York First round, blood for Connelly Both men were rather groggy in the fourth round In the last round Connelly came up smiling but very weak Nevertheless he led off well and staggered Neary, winning the fight

COLORADO'S CAPITOL.

The Bond Proposition Carried by a Considerable Majority.

O'Donnell Found Guilty and Sentenced to Death.

Masonic Temple, New York, Burned--Fires in Chicago.

Colorado's Capitol

DENVER December 1 —The state board of canvassers met at the state house to day to count the votes on the bond question The returns from all the counties are not yet in To-day the board opened and counted the votes of all the counties but Eagle, Lake, Garfield, Mesa, Las Animas and La Plata The total vote so far is 21 406 and the majority in favor of the bonded indebtedness is 4,556 Of the counties not heard from Eagle, Garfield, Mesa and La Plata poll but a small vote and the result in them will affect the result but little either way Only about 300 votes were cast in Lake county on the bond question and it is said that fully half of these were in favor In Las Animas county it is thought the majority against the bonds will be quite large If the estimate with regard to the other counties is correct, however, the proposition is certainly carried

Murder Case

DENVER, December 1 —This morning O J Haller was arraigned for preliminary examination before Justice Sopris for the murder of his wife Alice and S H Norris on October 23, at the residence of his wife, corner Nineteenth and Arapahoe streets J A Logue, an eye witness to the shooting, was the only person examined, when the case was continued one week. Nothing in addition to the facts published at the time of the shooting was brought out.

O'Donnell's Trial

LONDON, December 1 —The trial of O'Donnell for the murder of Carey was resumed to day The court room was crowded Walter Young, a Port Elizabeth cab driver, was called for the defense and testified that he frequently drove the family around Port Elizabeth and they ought to know him When Mrs Carey and her son Tom denied it, he was panic-stricken He once said to Tom Carey at Port-Elizabeth, "You are a fine fellow! Why didn't you shoot O'Donnell when he shot your father?" Tom answered, 'I had no revolver. I went to get it, but when I went it was gone, because my father had it" Witness had mentioned it to other cab drivers Another witness was called for the defense, and Russell began his address to the jury

Russell urged that O'Donnell acted only under the threat of personal violence The jury could not convict him of murder, although it might not be possible to let him go free altogether The statement is utterly false that O'Donnell went on board the steamer Kinfauns Castle to track Carey, like a sleuth hound at the bidding of a secret society. Russell said these were only newspaper charges, which he warmly denounced

Judge Denman remarked that the counsel was hardly promoting the interests of his client. He could trust the jury would not be influenced by anything except evidence given in the court

Russell said the accusal had an important bearing because it suggested the words, "I was sent to do it," which were put into O'Donnell's mouth by Mrs Carey, but in deference to the judge's remarks he would make no further reference to newspaper attacks

Russell then compared O'Donnell who, he said, was an honest, hard working man, with Carey, who was a villain execrated by the people, unpardoned by the queen, known to be cruel, treacherous and desperate. It was unreasonable to suppose if O'Donnell premeditated the murder of Carey he would have committed it in the presence of several witnesses

Russell said that although no witness saw a pistol in Carey's hand, yet it was quite likely a pistol was drawn, but owing to the uncertain light in the cabin and the excitement of the moment it escaped observation. He submitted the theory that Carey picked up the revolver when his father fell and kept it for the purpose of shooting O'Donnell if he got a chance, or for the purpose of concealing it in order to make it appear that O'Donnell committed an unprovoked murder

Russell, after insisting upon the credibility of the testimony of Young, the cab driver, made an eloquent appeal to the jurors for an unprejudiced and calm consideration of the case If they were drawn irresistibly to the conclusion that the prisoner was guilty they would convict him, but if they felt there were important parts of the evidence which crumbled when they attempted to stand upon them then whatever suspicions they might have they would give the prisoner the benefit of the doubt. It was better that a guilty person should sometimes escape punishment than that an innocent one perchance should suffer Russell spoke four hours, and upon concluding was loudly applauded by the crowd. The judge sternly reprimanded the applauders.

Attorney General James closed the case for the government He said that so much had been said to blacken Carey's character that people might believe it was right The jury had nothing to do with this The question for their consideration was 'Did the prisoner wilfully murder him'' Sworn facts left no doubt as to that The prisoner never pleaded self-defense until he saw his solicitor at Port Elizabeth and there was no evidence to support the theory of a struggle or quarrel. The prisoner's counsel had told the jury a story which O'Donnell had told somebody else It was theory un supported by evidence The attorney general denied that O'Donnell had shunned Carey He invited him to drink shortly before he shot him The woman with O'Donnell in the steamer knew all about the shooting It was strange she was not called as a witness If she was O'Donnell's wife she could not testify If she was his mistress why were the prisoner's counsel afraid to call her?

Sullivan, of the counsel for O'Donnell, objected to the remarks of the attorney general and said the woman had been alluded to in the evidence as Mrs. O'Donnell, and the attorney general had no right to throw suspicion on her Judge Denman said he considered the attorney general's remarks quite fair

The attorney general continued saying it was evident she was not called because she could only corroborate the other witnesses At Port Elizabeth O'Donnell stated before the magistrate that he snatched the pistol from Carey's hand If so he was no longer in danger of his life If so, how did young Carey get the pistol which O'Donnell had snatched from his father? That statement was so absurd that another one was made for the prisoner to day, inconsistent with the former and equally incredible It would compel the jury to believe young Carey was guilty of perjury and was so precocious as to conceal the pistol in order to fasten the crime upon the prisoner The attorney general said he thought Mrs O'Donnell's remark 'Never mind, O'Donnell, you are no informer," showed what really happened She saw O'Donnell shoot Carey, though the crime was not in common with the offense of being an informer The whole theory of self defense, said the attorney general, was incredible The prisoner shot Carey deliberately and openly because he believed it a praiseworthy act and wished to enjoy all the notoriety that would attach to it History was full of instances of men seeking such glory The jury he knew would be superior to any bias and pronounce upon the facts in the case

The attorney general occupied an hour and a half The judge then delivered his charge to the jury, which at 7 p m retired At 7 40 they returned and requested some further explanations After receiving instructions the jury retired but again returned and asked explanations These were given and they again retired At nine the jury came into court with a verdict of 'guilty" Judge Denman thereupon sentenced O'Donnell to death

Judge Denman in his charge to the jury said the evidence was compact The question simply was "Was the killing in self defense" The jury must decide the case regardless of what they may read in the newspapers for the shooting of Carey on account of their morbid and sensational paragraphs concerning him The judge in reviewing the evidence said he found the witnesses agreed with each other that up to the moment of the shooting, O'Donnell and Carey seemed to be friendly As to O'Donnell's words to Mrs Carey, under the circumstances, the judge thought the jury should adopt the version most favorable to the prisoner It was plain that O'Donnell did not say "I am sorry, but I had to do it He attacked me first" The boy Carey was astute, over sharp, deeply interested in the result, likely to stretch the truth and contradict himself and other witnesses His statements should be narrowly watched and were not to be relied on unless corroborated The absence of the woman, called but not proven to be Mrs O'Donnell, was of great significance and open to comment by the counsel, especially as she came from the cape as a witness O'Donnell's threat to shoot Carey was of the greatest importance in view of the fact that he killed Carey the next day The judge referring to the testimony of Cubitt said the giving of the portait and sketches of Carey was a dangerous proceeding, one likely to make him think the killing of such an infamous person no crime The foundation of society would be shaken if it was supposed the life of an infamous person might be excusably taken The judge said O'Donnell's statement that he snatched the pistol from Carey's hands, if true, would not justify his acquittal or a verdict of manslaughter, for O'Donnell then was no longer in danger of his life and had no excuse for shooting Carey three times

The judge then defined the terms murder and manslaughter, and said if the jury were satisfied that self-defense was proven, they should acquit the prisoner If they thought the prisoner suffered real provocation, they should find for manslaughter If, however, they were convinced the deed was not committed in self defense or under grave provocation, they must pronounce him guilty of wilful murder.

Upon the completion of the judge's charge the jury at 7 p m retired to deliberate. When the jury first returned O'Donnell stood up in the dock and looked about with great composure. The jury returned to ask whether, if a man had a deadly weapon in his hand and another thought he was about to use it against him and shot the former it would be manslaughter or murder The judge replied that it would be neither, but he asked where was the evidence of any act done by Carey which induced O'Donnell to think Carey meant to shoot him When the jury retired Sullivan expressed a doubt whether the judge had not given a wrong direction to the minds of the jury by his question Judge Denman asked Sullivan if he could suggest where such evidence was When the jury returned the second time, they asked the judge the meaning of motive aforethought The judge carefully defined the law of murder bearing upon that point as applied to the present case, quoting authorities in support of his definition and application. The jury again retired and returned in four minutes with a verdict of wilful murder

When Judge Denman asked O'Donnell if he had anything to say why sentence of death should not be passed upon him, O'Donnell made no reply The judge then passed the sentence of death in the usual form The prisoner now wanted to speak The judge, however, ordered his removal Police seized him, when O'Donnell held up his right hand, the fingers extended, and shouted, 'Three cheers for old Ireland' good bye United States' to hell with the British and the British crown It's a plot made up by the crown" The prisoner shouting, cursing and struggling, was forcibly removed by police amid a most fearful confusion and slamming of doors This action of O'Donnell caused the greatest excitement and surprise, as he had previously gained the sympathy of the audience by his good behavior

FATAL ACCIDENT.

A Defective Wagon Bolt Causes a Runaway

Which Results in the Death of Chas. S. Spraul.

Facts Obtained From an Eye Witness--No Inquest.

Yesterday morning while I J Payne, an employe at the ranch of Charles Hill, about twelve miles northeast of Colorado Springs was on his way to town in company with a boy named Charles S Spraul, an accident occurred which resulted in the instantaneous death of the boy From Daniel Currie, who was an eye witness to the accident, we obtained the following facts

Mr Currie was coming to this city with a load of lumber from Weir's mill When a short distance from the city, near the big ditch, he noticed a team ahead of him acting strangely The horses were running and the wagon was tacking from right to left as if something had happened to the reach or running gear He noticed distinctly that the driver had lost control of the horses They had proceeded but a short distance when the wagon upset, throwing the occupants, a man and boy to the ground, and the team started off across the prairie with the wagon and front wheels, leaving the remainder of the wagon in the road In the meantime a wagon coming from the opposite direction containing, as was afterwards assertained, J C Clifford and wife, of Easton, stopped where the accident occurred, and aided in relieving the two persons from the wreck. The wagon was turned over and the driver Mr Payne, who was but slightly injured was released from the wreck The boy was, however, taken from beneath the wagon unconscious and died almost instantly thereafter, Mr Currie had by this time come to the place where the wreck occurred and assisted in placing the body of the boy on top of the load of lumber, brought it to this city and placed it in charge of Messrs Hallett & Baker, the undertakers

Mr. Currie is confident that the accident could not have been avoided, while Mr. Payne, who was driving the team, tells the same story Mr Payne says that one of the bolts in the hound came out, causing the tongue to sway from one side to another, thus scaring the horses and starting them on the run. Mr Payne, himself, escaped serious injury by falling beneath the box, but he thinks that the boy was killed by either the edge of the box or hub of the wheel striking him on the head

Coroner Perkins was notified of the accident, but did not deem it necessary to hold an inquest as it was perfectly clear that the death had been accidental The boy is an orphan and came here from Boston, Mass, and has been attending school at what is known as the Hill school house, on the Divide Mr Hill was notified of the accident and was expected in town last night. In the mean time the body remains at Hallett & Baker's undertaking rooms Doctors Solly and Hart, who examined the body, say that death was instantaneous and was caused by a compound fracture of the skull just above the left ear

Work of the Fire Fiend

NEW YORK, December 1 —About 8 30 this morning the roof of the Masonic temple, Twenty third street and Sixth avenue, was discovered afire Before the engines reached the spot great volumes of smoke belched from the windows in the asylum of the Knights Templar in the mansard story just below the roof and dome Thick volumes also poured from the roof followed by sheets of flames which darted high up in the air Fire engines came tearing to the scene a few minutes after the alarm sounded The report that the Masonic temple was on fire, spread rapidly and hundreds of the fraternity hurried to the place A large force of police kept the crowd back from the firemen

Patrick Lynch and Sam Warren, the foremost firemen in the mansard story, were struck to the floor by heavy plastering falling from the ceiling, and were overcome by heat and smoke They were rescued by their comrades and removed to the hospital, restored to consciousness and sent home

As the building below the mansard is fireproof, the firemen devoted their energies to saving what portion they could of the mansard story The entire building is water soaked and much valuable property is destroyed After two hours hard work further spread of the flames was prevented in the mansard portion, but they were still raging in the roof

Many beautiful pictures which the order has been so long accumulating are very much injured, if not ruined The loss on the building is $75,000 The insurance on the temple is $200,000 The great crowd that gathered was, with difficulty, kept back by the police General Grant tried to get through the line but was repulsed by a police officer. On a second attempt he was recognized and allowed to pass The Masonic temple was five years in construction The corner stone was laid in 1870 and the building dedicated June 2, 1875 It cost a million and a half, exclusive of the value of the ground, which was another half million.

CHICAGO, December 1 —At half past 5 this afternoon fire was discovered in the Farwell block, the largest business building in the city, bounded by Adams Market Monroe streets and the river The great structure, however was broken by heavy fire walls running through it, but for which the entire building would have been swept by the flames, The fire was confined to Nos 168 and 170 Market street, the three lower floors of which were occupied by Metzler Bros, notion dealers and the four upper floors by Beak & Bucher, furriers The latter firm employed nearly 200 girls, all but about 75 of whom had gone home When the fire was discovered those remaining in the building became aware of the approach of the flames by smoke seeking its way from the lower floor where the fire originated A panic ensued among the young women and their terror increased by discovering that the main door way leading to the lower floors was locked and barred They made their way back to the fifth floor and a number made their way along a window ledge on the outside of the building to a point beyond one of the protecting fire walls into an adjoining store Two young women, Kitty Hilgert and Frances Fairweather, made their way to a fire escape, but through terror at the view of the flames bursting from the building immediately below, dropped to the stone sidewalk and both were instantly killed

Great confusion reigned in and about the building up to 9 o'clock, when the statement of those interested was made that all remaining employes had escaped from the structure but as the upper floor is filled with dense volumes of smoke, and as the firemen had been unable to make a search, fears were entertained that further loss of life had occurred

Metzler Bros carried a heavy stock, but their loss is not known at this hour Beck & Bucher had $80,000 stock and carried $15 000 insurance Work, Wacksmith & Co, clothing, and Taylor Bros., wholesale hats and caps, occupying one of the other stores, carried $300,000 in stock, which was badly damaged by water, but is fully covered by insurance

The firemen made a search of the upper floors of the burned building, shortly after ten o'clock. It is now believed certain that there are no other casualties than those reported Metzler's loss is estimated at $70,000 to $75,000, insurance $40,000 Beck & Bucher's loss will approximate $50 000 to $75,000 Loss on building $10,000, fully insured

9 30 p m. The Evening Journal building, on Dearborn street, is now on fire

While nearly every engine in the city had been called into service at the Farwell block a fire-alarm was turned in from the office of the Evening Journal on Dearborn street, between Madison and Monroe, and before the arrival of the first steamer on the scene, the flames were making their way through the window in the upper story of its fine stone office building The flames had made rapid progress and despite the best efforts of the department at 11 o'clock, when the fire seemed fully under control, the three upper stories were very thoroughly burned, the entire structure completely water soaked and the working material and paper, with the possible exception of the presses, utterly destroyed The building was a five-story structure erected to replace the one destroyed in the great fire, and was taken possession of by the paper in April '73 The J B Jeffrey Printing company, the largest show printing establishment in the country, occupied a portion of the building and suffered almost total loss, which it is estimated will approximate fully $60,000 The Journal and printing company are both covered by adequate insurance

LONDON, December 1.—The deputy grand master of English Orangemen has issued an order in connection with the case of Lord Rossmore He says he cannot sit still and tamely submit to see his Irish brethren so treated. He suggests that effective steps be taken to express sympathy with the Orangemen, Monoghan and Formany

THE SURPLUS

The most prominent economic question before the country at the present time is how shall we reduce our revenue so as to prevent the large surplus. The question has assumed great proportions, because in settling it large interests are seriously threatened. The sensible plan would be to take off the most burdensome tax and thus give the greatest relief to the people. But unfortunately this is not the view taken by protectionists or southern free traders. This class of people have suggested three plans.

The first plan is to abolish entirely the tax on tobacco and whisky. This would undoubtedly have the effect of wiping out the surplus This plan is favored by extreme protectionists like Judge Kelley, of Pennsylvania, and free traders from whisky and tobacco producing states like Kentucky and Virginia. Speaker Carlisle and Randolph Tucker, who are among the most intelligent free traders in the south, favor this plan. The objection to this plan is that such repeal of taxes would not decrease our burdens. The tax does not carry with it any hardship nor would its abolition bring any relief. It would have only two effects, to enable the smoker and drinker to smoke more tobacco and drink more whisky, or it would increase the profits of the retail tobacconist or liquor seller. Neither one of those objects is particularly desirable. In fact it may be stated that a tax should not be repealed that does not take off burdens. It is better to let it remain and use the income from it to pay our debts or else make public improvements. The surplus does no injury and there is no need of wiping it out by repealing taxes that are not burdensome.

The second plan is to distribute this surplus to the states. This is the Wharton Barker plan. It has few friends and presents numerous objections. They have been given in this paper before. Mr. Blaine in his statement in Sunday's paper, gave an excellent summary of objections to it that show the plan indefensible.

The third plan is that of Mr. Blaine's, which we published on Sunday. Mr. Blaine suggests that the entire receipts of the tax on whisky be distributed among the states in proportion to their population. But the objections are many to this The only superiority that Mr. Blaine really shows his plan to have over the Wharton Barker plan is that the income of the states will be more regular. The tax on whisky produces about the same amount annually, while the surplus would vary, being dependent on the expenditures, as well as the receipts But Mr. Barker can say that Mr. Blaine's plan has an equally bad defect. If from other sources the income of the government is not sufficient to pay its expenses, the government cannot make up the deficiency by using a part of the income of the tax on whisky. Mr. Barker only proposes to distribute the surplus revenue so that the expenditures of the government shall certainly be met. Mr. Blaine's plan may involve a large deficiency in the treasury as the government must depend entirely on its customs duties which are variable. It is open to nearly all the objections to the Wharton Barker plan which have been fully treated in this paper

The theory on which all these plans are based is wrong. The principle on which all taxes should be reduced, when there is a surplus, is to remove the tax which will most relieve the people. The southern free traders and extreme protectionists like Judge Kelley violate this principle by abolishing the easiest tax we have and which is not a burden The southern men urge this because it will relieve their states of heavy taxation. But this is an error. It is true that the south pays a large proportion of the tax for whisky and tobacco to the government. But it simply advances this money and gets it back when the whisky and tobacco is sold The man who really pays the tax is the consumer. If the tax were taken off the producers in the south would sell their whisky for as much less than at present as the tax is. The only tax the south pays is on the part it drinks, and on which the tax is collected. (We may suppose that not all whisky drank is "Moonshiner"). There is no excuse for Judge Kelley's advocacy of this plan, except that he fears the presence of the surplus may call attention to some of the exorbitant and unnecessary protection. But this excuse is insufficient for taking away an income of $100,000,000 from a tax not a burden The other protectionists don't make this mistake in the Blaine or Barker plan. But their motive is the same and the result also is practically the same, for such a distribution would not lessen taxation in the country, state, or city. It would only promote extravagance.

Now it is evident that there are taxes that could be repealed that would lessen the burdens of the country. Why not reduce these? Is not this better than the abolition of a tax not a burden, or a distribution of the money so as not to lessen taxation? Are the protectionist manufacturers sincere in their protestations of desiring the prosperity of this country when they selfishly ask for the abolition of this surplus in a way that takes no burden from, nor confers any benefit on the people, simply to protect their own interests? This is neither statesmanship nor patriotism, but is simply a mean, selfish effort to keep up protective duties that are unreasonable If the protectionists are sincere and believe in their own theory, the only consistent thing for them to do is to raise the protective duties to a prohibitory point where there would be no importations and so no duties collected, This would abolish the surplus, and would have the merit of consistency if not of common sense. Take one item, sugar We are now collecting $10,000,000 yearly for duties on it. It the tariff were put so high that none could be imported, then our surplus would be reduced by $40,000,000 But it will occur to some people that as sugar is used by rich and poor alike and is a necessary article of food, that it would be a wise thing to abolish this tax or reduce it so much that the income would be greatly reduced,

The only noticeable part of Speaker Carlisle's speech is that referring to tariff reform. What he says may be the secret of his success He has always insisted a tariff reform was necessary and has demanded in season and out of season But he now shows the white feather and his election may have been obtained by pledges to prevent interference with the tariff. Mr. Carlisle wanted tariff reform last year. We cannot see why it is not as much needed now as a year ago. There has been no striking change in our affairs Better things were expected. He should have told congress it was its duty to reduce the surplus and in a way to reduce the burdens of the people, not in a way to benefit pig iron manufacturers. The explanation of the change is that Mr. Carlisle's district demanded a pronounced free trader, and that the house wanted a speaker who was not for tariff reform. It is seldom that a democratic politician sticks to any principles that do not promote office seeking ambitions. We should not expect more of Mr. Carlisle than of the average democratic politician.

Progress in Ocean Navigation

Contemporary Review.

If this were not an age in which men had almost ceased to wonder, and had altogether ceased to wonder much and to wonder long, the swift development of our merchant steam marine of iron and steel might well be offered to the astonishment of mankind. A hundred years ago Henry Cort's great invention for rolling iron bars and plates had not been devised, and nothing in the shape of iron plates of which ships could be built existed. Even fifty years ago, although several canal boats and some few coasting steamers had been constructed of iron, two or three of which had made sea voyages on their way to their destinations, the construction of iron ships for ocean navigation, if thought of and spoken of, had not yet commenced. But now it is a matter of daily practice for the American and Englishman to step on board a steam palace of steel and sweep across the vast sea desert that separates their shores at the rate of twenty miles an hour. In eight days you pass from Pall Mall to Broadway. The City of Rome and the Alaska has each steamed over the distance between Sandy Hook and Queenstown in 6 days and 22 hours. As a means of comparing this ocean speed with what was happening before the days of iron hulls propelled by steam engines, it may be instructive and amusing to refer to a piece of evidence once given to the house of commons. The captain of a sailing troop transport stated that he was on one occasion lying windbound in the Downs, with troops for the West Indies, in company with another vessel similarly employed and having the same destination. A slant of wind came of which the witness was just able to avail himself, and he got away down the channel. After an ordinary outward voyage he exchanged troops and made an ordinary voyage home again, many and many a long week elapsing, nevertheless, before he again cast anchor between the Forelands. But when he did so he had his old companion for a companion again, for the slant of wind that sufficed for the one was unsufficient for the other, and there she had lain "above her beef bones" ever since. It is to the introduction of iron and steel into ship building that we owe the vast improvement in ocean speed. Neither the strength to resist the enormous strains of modern engines, equivalent to 10,000 horses, nor the length and fineness of form required for the acceptance, so to speak, of high speeds, could have been obtained all the time wood was the sole ship building material. With iron and steel as our material we may be a long way at present from a limit to speed and size. And yet the change in size has been very striking. We may give an instance which will illustrate this, and at the same time illustrate the growth of professional opinion on these questions. M. Dupuy de Lome, afterward chief naval architect of the French navy under Napoleon III., made a professional visit to this country in 1842. He went to Bristol, and there inspected the Great Britain, then building. In a report which he subsequently made to his government he referred to that ship as "the most gigantic experiment ever tried in the naval department," and stated that "the proportions of the hull depart altogether from any experiment previously made." The Great Britain was 274 feet in length; the City of Rome is 586 feet.

Nothing Doing on Top

Boston Traveller.

Here is an instance of good repartee. They were two solid citizens. One was bald, but rejoiced in a fine luxuriant beard. The other had a heavy growth of hair on the head, but was very bald as to his chin. The bald-chinned citizen was a very talkative individual, whose conversation was rapid and incessant. Meeting the bald headed citizen one day in a company of gentlemen, he opened fire on him touching the bareness of his sconce. "What do you suppose," said he, in his rattling, vivacious way, "what do you suppose, neighbor, is the reason that you have no hair on your head, and so much on your chin?" "Well," said the other, very deliberately, "scientists say that men who work with their brains create such a heat in the scalp that the hair is worn off." "That sounds like a likely theory," chimed in the loquacious citizen. "Yes, it does," returned the other, "and I think your case is a striking illustration of its probability. Now you have plenty of hair on your head, but none on your chin, which just backs up the scientific theory, because all your work is done with your jaws—there's nothing doing on top."

Walsh to Arthur

WASHINGTON, December 3—On the fourth of November John A. Walsh mailed a letter to President Arthur, and asserts that he received no answer He submits its contents to his fellow-citizens, which in substance is as follows In obedience to a sub pœna, he appeared before the grand jury of the district in the matter of United States vs. ex-Senator William Pitt Kellogg, and the jury found an indictment against Kellogg for bribery. He learned the case was fixed for the 10th of December, and Kellogg probably plead privilege as member of congress to avoid trial Gentlemen connected with the star route case are now anxious to secure his testimony, but he declined to see them for the reason that when he was witness before he was slandered and criminally libelled without the government taking legal steps for his protection

Walsh concludes his letter to the president as follows

If my presence as witness in behalf of the United States against Thos J Brady and Wm Pitt Kellogg is deemed of sufficient importance by you to give your assent to the following requests, I will hold such conference with the prosecution as is proper and appear as witness in response to sub pœna First, Merrick or Ker to appear before the present grand jury of the district with a view to prosecuting indictments against Geo C. Gorham, of the National Republican, and A C Buell et al, of the Critic, for criminally libeling me in the matter of the Benner claim, second, that you request Attorney General Brewster to answer my letter of inquiry addressed him touching a letter written by him to the secretary of the navy, W E Chandler, concerning me, third, your assurance that the government will protect me as a witness By protection I do not mean physically, as I can do that myself. I mean that protection from slander and libel which the law entitles me to as a witness Fourth, assurance that Geo Bliss will not represent the government in its actions against Thos. J Brady and Wm Pitt Kellogg. Believe, Mr President, if I thus address you it is because experience has taught me that no proper remedy will be accorded me elsewhere. When you reflect, sir, that the accused, Kellogg, proclaims his intentions of bringing on the witness stand a member of your cabinet to discredit the prosecution's own witness by having him recite language used concerning said witness by another member of your cabinet, to wit, the attorney general of the United States, is it not time that I should know definitely whether or not I am to have the moral and legal support of the government? One of the special counsel of the government in the star route cases said sub pœnas had been issued for witnesses in the case against Kellogg and the government expected to proceed promptly.

Irish Disorders

WEXFORD, December 3—A mob last evening attacked a theatre in which evangelical services were being held and attempted to burn the building The mob took possession of the town, broke the windows of a Protestant church and of nearly all the houses occupied by Protestants The dresses of ladies who attended the services at the church and theatre were torn off and gentlemen accompanying them stoned Several were injured severely The mob paraded the streets several hours singing "God save Ireland"

NEW YORK, December 3.—A pastoral of Cardinal McCabe strongly denounces secret societies, which, it says, seems to have a fatal charm for Irishmen, ending generally with the hangman's rope or the infamy of the informer

Father McCarten was stoned yesterday passing through the Orange quarter of Newry.

A prominent Invincible undergoing penal servitude offers to give important testimony against fourteen men, whose trial begins today for the murder of Mrs. Smythe, near Collinstown, in April '82.

DUBLIN, December 2. The Orange lodges continue to pass resolutions strongly condemning the suspension of Lord Rossmore Public meetings will be held in various parts of Ulster to pass resolutions of like tenor

At Newry, Protestants on their way to church were assaulted Four companies of infantry, with twenty rounds of ammunition per man, were posted about the town, which the police are patrolling A body of lancers occupy the square and the constabulary forces are stationed at the court house and on the Warden Point

NEWRY, December 2 There was a large attendance at the Catholic cathedral where Rev Mr Maccarten, referring to the meeting which was prohibited, said such acts on the part of the government were enough to make rebels of them all, and, if persisted in, would drive the people to rebellion He declared the meetings would be held, despite the government or the Orangemen, and characterized the prohibition of the meeting as a direct insult to the Catholics

During the attack on the Protestants two policemen were injured by stones

The Markets

NEW YORK, December 3—Money easy, 2 to 3, prime paper 5 to 6½, sterling exchange steady at 4 82½, demand 4 85, governments strong states quiet, railways generally firm The week opened with a firm market for stocks, and prices in early transactions advanced ⅛ to ½ Before the first call they weakened and lower figures prevailed during the remainder of the day. The decline ranged from ¼ to 1½ There were rallies at intervals, extending at one time to ⅜ to ¾ The market left off irregular, some shares at the lowest point of the day As compared with Saturday closing prices were down ¼ to 1 ½ Transactions 277,000

There was active business and a weak tone to the mining market during the morning and prices were generally lower Iron Silver declined to 2 15, Northern Belle to 1 35, Sutro Tunnel to 15, Robinson Consolidated to 32 and Sierra Grande to 70 For a majority of these stocks there is no reasonable cause for the decline The production of bullion shows no reduction and some of them should be among the list of dividend payers Investment shares were firm Standard selling 7 00 and 6 87½ and one lot of 30 shares 7 25 Horn Silver was 6.25 to 6 50

No More Rheumatism, Gout or Neuralgia.

Immediate Relief Warranted,
Permanent Cure Guaranteed.

Five years established and never known to fail in a single case, acute or chronic Refer to all prominent physicians and druggists for the standing of Salicylica

THE ONLY DISSOLVER OF THE POISONOUS URIC ACID WHICH EXISTS IN THE BLOOD OF RHEUMATIC AND GOUTY PATIENTS

SALICYLICA is known as a common sense remedy, because it strikes directly at the cause of Rheumatism, Gout and Neuralgia, while so many so-called specifics and supposed panaceas only treat locally the effects

It has been conceded by eminent scientists that outward applications, such as rubbing with oils, ointments, liniments, and soothing lotions will not eradicate these diseases which are the result of the poisoning of the blood with Uric Acid

SALICYLICA works with marvelous effect on this acid and so removes the disorder It is now exclusively used by all celebrated physicians of America and Europe. Highest Medical Academy of Paris reports 95 per cent cures in three days that SALICYLICA is a certain cure for RHEUMATISM, GOUT and NEURALGIA. The most intense pains are subdued almost instantly
